Six professional women chosen as this year's Les Dames d'Escoffier International (LDEI) Legacy Award recipients have each earned a mentoring opportunity delivered by six of the organization's distinguished member. This year's winners, Staci Mickelson, St. Paul, MN; Jovan Sage, Brunswick, GA; Sue Coraggio Snape, Marietta, GA; Stephanie Jane Carter, New Orleans, LA; Sunita de Turreil, Palo Alto, CA; and Jane Copeland, North Vancouver, BC, will each participate in a high-energy, labor-intensive, and career-expanding week customized by hosting Dames.

Les Dames d'Escoffier International (LDEI) is an organization of women leaders in food, beverage and hospitality whose mission is education and philanthropy for the good of the global community. Established in 2009 and generously supported by The Julia Child Foundation for Gastronomy and the Culinary Arts, LDEI's Legacy Awards competition is open to women who live within the organization's operational scope of the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the United Kingdom and who have a minimum of four years of industry experience.

This year's opportunities include the chance to helping with harvest and production at one of Canada's best-known makers of fine preserves and wine, learn about the winery and wine tourism industries at Washington state's oldest winery, and experience the art of fine chocolate making at an award-winning chocolatier in London, England. Six awards were presented across four categories: culinary; food/wine journalism; wine; and farm-to-table.
